DETAILED ACTION

Status of Claims

1. Applicant's response, filed 2/27/2008, to the Office Action mailed 8/27/2007 is acknowledged. Applicant has amended the Specification, submitted a replacement drawing, and presented arguments in response to the Office Action.
2. Claims 1 and 2 are pending and presently under consideration.
3. Applicant's arguments have been fully considered and are persuasive. Rejections and/or objections not reiterated from previous office actions are hereby withdrawn. The following rejections and/or objections are either reiterated or newly applied. They constitute the complete set presently being applied to the instant application.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

4. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.
5. Claims 1 and 2 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Tanaka et al. (Cancer Letters, Vol. 172, pages 119-126 [see Applicant's 12/23/2005 IDS]), in view of Fan et al., editors ("Mouse Skin tumor Assay", 1996, Toxicology and Risk Assessment: Principles, Methods, and Applications, pages 124-127).

Tanaka et al. teach the instantly claimed compound and its high anti-tumor promoting activity. See Abstract and compound 1 on page 121. Tanaka et al. teach compound 1 "is considered to be a naturally occurring triterpenoind with the strongest anti-tumor promoting activity in the in vivo assay ever known". See page 124, last paragraph. The in vivo assay used by Tanaka et al. is a two-stage mouse skin carcinogenesis assay, as described on page 122. The reference discloses that compound 1 is a "promising candidate for effective and safe chemopreventive agents".

Tanaka et al. do not teach the use of the instantly claimed compound (i.e., Tanaka's compound 1) for the treatment of lung tumorigenesis or its oral administration.

Fan et al. teach mouse skin tumor assays and their use as a screening tool for carcinogens and carcinogen promoters. Fan et al. teach a correlation between the mouse skin tumor assay and the mouse lung adenoma assay. Additionally, the reference teaches the use of the skin tumor assays for pharmacological research on chemotherapeutic agents. See pages 124-127, especially the 3rd and 4th paragraphs on page 127.

It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention combine the teachings of Tanaka et al. and Fan et al. The strong anti-tumor promoting activity of the instantly claimed compound, as taught by Tanaka et al., would have motivated the skilled artisan to test the effectiveness of the compound in inhibiting tumorigenesis in other tissues, including the lung. The teaching by Fan et al. of a correlation between the mouse skin tumor and lung adenoma assays would have further motivated the artisan to test the compound for effectiveness in inhibiting lung tumorigenesis.

Oral bioavailability of the instantly claimed compound is a characteristic of the compound. If the compound was bioavailable after oral administration, one of ordinary skill in the art would have been motivated to administer the compound by this route for patient convenience and administration compliance.

A reference is good not only for what it teaches by direct anticipation but also for what one of ordinary skill in the art might reasonably infer from the teachings. (In re Opprecht 12 USPQ 2d 1235, 1236 (Fed Cir. 1989); In re Bode 193 USPQ 12 (CCPA) 1976). In light of the forgoing discussion, the Examiner concludes that the subject matter defined by the instant claims would have been obvious within the meaning of 35 USC 103(a). From the teachings of the references, it is apparent that one of ordinary skill in the art would have had a reasonable expectation of success in producing the claimed invention. Therefore, the invention as a whole is prima facie obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made, as evidenced by the references, especially in the absence of evidence to the contrary.
